What drove fund performance during the past 12 months?

- U.S. equities moved higher over the 12-month period ended June 30, 2024.
- In our view, resilient economic growth, a strong labor market, higher corporate earnings, and easing inflation gave investors the support they needed to look past higher interest rates and bid stocks higher.
- Small cap stocks, while delivering a respectable 10% index return over the period, were generally overshadowed by the market’s narrow focus on larger, AI-related companies.
- Experience has taught us that businesses with the potential for earnings growth and multiple expansion can be a powerful source of outperformance.
- As such, we employ a fundamental research-driven process that includes screening for companies that have multiple quarters of year-over-year earnings declines; exploring the reason for the declines; and singling out the companies we believe are poised for an earnings rebound via a cohesive turnaround plan, a new management team, or through improvements or changes to the business.
- From a sector perspective, positive stock selection in the communication services and consumer discretionary sectors aided returns.
- Conversely, negative stock selection in the information technology and healthcare sectors were headwinds to relative performance.

Past performance is not predictive of future performance. The graph and table do not reflect the deduction of taxes that a shareholder would pay on Fund distributions or the redemption of Fund shares. If reflected, the taxes and fees would reduce the performance quoted. Net asset value, investment return and principal value will fluctuate, so shares, when redeemed, may be worth more or less than their original cost.
